Summary

Lizzie Marvally 's career has covered many diverse paths. Her journey started with her love for music. Discovered by Frankie Stevens and her famous uncle, Sir Howard Morrison, in her early teens, Lizzie was on the road at age 16. Described as a 'true songbird' and, by the former Prime Minister John Key himself, as a 'national treasure'.

Her musical life has been something of a wild ride: two major international signings, two top-ten albums, a top-fifteen pop debut, two European tours, concerts in Asia and Australia amongst others, a smash-hit charity single, two semi-finalist songs in the International Songwriting Competition, a song co-written with P-MONEY in the Kiwi film Born To Dance and countless national anthems and tours.

In just ten years, Lizzie has become something of an industry veteran at the (not very) grown-up age of 26. Lizzie writes one of the most well read columns in the New Zealand Herald. She also runs a successful website . Villainese.com which is on a mission to empower young women through online media projects aiming to create smart, "no-filter" media. Lizzie is also pursuing an acting career, as she has always wowed audiences with her incredible performances.
